Republicans increase middle income taxes to pay for estate tax giveaway to the wealthy

By Susan B. Kellom, ADC Chair

Inside this issue:

Message from the Chair

I pride myself on knowing how and when the Republicans are trying to shaft us, but the enormous pick-pocketing of the middle class has escaped me for quite some time.

We have all read about the elimination of the estate tax. We've seen how the Republicans, at the behest of extraordinarily wealthy families and their lobbyists, have reframed the issue as the Death Tax and erroneously convinced millions of Americans that their middle class estate would be subject to the tax.

The Family Farm and Dad's Drugstore are lost to Snidely Whiplash they scream, even though it ain't so. At most, 2.1% of estates are subject to the tax, but the Republicans would have us believe that you and I will lose our knick-knacks to the estate tax. This tax must go NOW, they insist.

But I never understood how they proposed to make up the difference in tax revenue.

The truth is that the repeal of the Estate Tax passed by the House, and now under consideration by the Senate, will eliminate the "stepped-up basis" for valuing inherited assets. To put things as simply as I can, the Mars family, the people who brought you M&Ms, and their ilk will not owe any inheritance taxes, but when you sell the family home that your parents bought in the 60's, you will pay capital gains tax on the difference between what they paid for it then and what you sell it for now.

SHHH, we're tracking duck, Jerry the Duck, that is

It's duck season in Virginia. And Jerry Kilgore continues to duck debates about the issues and push his ten weeks of dishonest reform. He's even ducking his own debate challenge! Today, Kaine for Governor is introducing a new tool to track Jerry Kilgore as he plays yet another round of duck, duck, duck debate.

Visit www.jerrytheduck.com, and you can watch Jerry duck, dive, and dodge the issues. You can also get the real story on his ten weeks of dishonest reform.

It's hard to say what Jerry Kilgore is afraid of, or why he won't meet Tim Kaine, face-to-face, to talk about the issues that matter to Virginia's future. But until we know the answers, you can catch all the action at www.jerrytheduck.com.

Lt. Gov. Tim Kaine Candidate for Governor

Under current law, you would receive the house at the “stepped-up” basis of today’s value. You would not owe any inheritance tax because your parents did not leave you millions. And when you sold the house, you would owe no capital gains tax. The same principle would be true for the nest egg of savings and stocks that your parents left you. No capital gains tax under today’s law, but you pay hefty capital gains under the new law. As Albert Crenshaw said in Sunday’s Washington Post Business section, our interests are not exactly aligned with those of the Mars family and others at their level.

This is what they are doing behind the scenes while they try to convince the nation that the real issue is federal judges who are not sufficiently persons of faith, their faith.

From the esoteric to the local.

The 2005 Virginia elections are as important to us as the issues before the US Congress. Electing Tim Kaine as Governor and Creigh Deeds as Attorney General is vitally important to the continued economic and social well-being of Virginia. I urge you to look at the positions of the candidates for Lt. Governor and 45th District house of Delegates and chose the person in the June 14th primary who will best represent you in that office.

We also must be gearing up to work on the campaigns of Brian Moran and Adam Ebbin for the House of Delegates, Randy Sengel for Commonwealth’s Attorney and Dana Lawhorne for Sheriff.

A busy and exciting campaign season is ahead and the strength of the Democratic Party in Alexandria and other northern Virginia communities is being counted on to carry the Commonwealth for our whole ticket.

Happy campaigning!

Trivia contest returns to newsletter, members rejoice

For several months there wasn’t room in the Alexandria Democrat for something as trivial as a trivia question. Members demanded that the one thing they most looked forward to be brought back and Todd Ruopp, ADC Public Information Office, responded.

May’s trivia question is, “How many Cabinet secretaries were replaced immediately following President Clinton’s reelection in 1996?”

The first person to contact Todd Ruopp with the correct answer and who attends the February meeting will collect the prize.

Young professionals raise $9,000 for Kaine in Alexandria

By Greg Roberts, ADC Deputy Chair for Precinct Operations—West

More than 100 young professionals from all over Northern Virginia converged on Southside 815 Restaurant in Alexandria on April 13th to show their support for Lt. Gov. Tim Kaine and his campaign to become our next Governor. The event netted more than $9,000 for the Kaine for Governor Campaign.

Alexandria Mayor Bill Euille introduced Lt. Gov. Kaine and tapped young voters as one of the keys to the election.

The event was hosted by Dominic Gabello, Craig Fifer, Ariane Holm, Jon Kel- ley, Sean Kumar, Mike Lieberman, Alfonso Lopez, Clark Mercer, Bryan Spoon, John Wertman, Greg Roberts and Todd Ruopp.

A special thank you goes to DPV Chair Kerry Donley for his assistance with setting up the event.

Mayor Euille to introduce May 22nd candidates forum

Mayor Bill Euille has agreed to introduce a Candidates Forum on Sunday May 22nd. This may be our last chance to hear from the six candidates running for the 45 District, Virginia House of Delegates seat. All six are strong candidates and its up to each of us to decide who can do the best job for Alexandria and the Democratic Party.

So far, the Firehouse Precinct

109 and Ladrey Precinct 101 are the sponsors of the forum. Sarah Stott, Firehouse Precinct Captain, is urging other precincts to join in the effort.

"There are plenty of opportunities for helping put on the event, from publicity to question development to refreshments. There are 12 Alexandria precincts in the 45th District. It'd be fun for all of us to get involved."

The Forum will take place at the Charles Houston Recreation Center Gymnasium at 901 Wythe Street on May 22nd from 3 - 5 pm. Lavern Chatman, CEO of the Northern Virginia Urban League will moderate. For more information about the event or to volunteer, contact Sarah Stott at sstott@comcast.net.

"This great Nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper. So, first of all, let me assert my firm belief that the only thing we have to fear is fear itself—nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror which paralyzes needed efforts to convert retreat into advance."

Polluter of the Potomac

By Congressman Jim Moran, Virginia's 8th District

Taking the children fishing is a rite of passage. Unfortunately, for Old Town residents such as Jonathon Krieger, who takes his two sons fishing along the Potomac, the rite comes with a warning – don't eat what you catch.

"It's really difficult telling my two little boys that we can't eat the striped bass, largemouth bass, catfish and other fish we catch because of mercury pollution," Krieger says. A major source of the mercury pollution to which Krieger referred comes from the Mirant power plant in Alexandria. We know this because, according to the Environmental Protection Agency, U.S. power plants – like Mirant's – are responsible for 41 percent of mercury emissions in this country.

Nearly a year ago, the Environmental Protection Agency and the Food and Drug Administration issued public warnings about the danger of eating fish with high levels of mercury. Health complications include learning disabilities in children and blood pressure instability in adults. Pregnant women and children are especially vulnerable to mercury contamination.

Yet now the EPA is undercutting efforts to keep high levels of mercury out of our air and water.

Under the bipartisan 1990 Clean Air Act amendments, the Mirant power plant in Alexandria would have been required to reduce its emissions of airborne mercury by about 90 percent during the next three years. But after recent rule changes by the EPA, and under a proposed version of the Clear Skies Initiative, the Mirant plant will not have to reduce its mercury emissions one iota.

Last month the EPA took the bizarre step of trying to remove power plants from the list of sources that must reduce "hazardous air pollutants," including mercury. In doing so, the agency enabled these plants to avoid the more stringent and timely reductions of mercury emissions that other major sources of mercury, such as medical waste incinerators, have had to meet. This change in classification carried out by regulatory fiat allows polluting power plants to delay the costs associated with reducing mercury emissions until 2018 – at the expense of the public's health. The EPA's new rule also will allow some power plants to forgo cleanup by buying pollution "credits" from cleaner facilities.

Now Senate Republicans are trying to exempt from mercury emission reductions any power plant that emits fewer than 30 pounds of mercury per smokestack per year. Roughly 40 percent of the nation's power plants fall into that category, including the Mirant plant in Alexandria. Not only would the plant not have to curb its mercury emissions under this proposal, it would be able to sell its pollution credits to other plants. Yet Mirant's five smokestacks together emit about 83 pounds of mercury a year.

The neighbors of the Mirant plant understand the health threat it represents. I have been working for years with the Alexandria City Council, local leaders and environmental organizations to find ways to reduce mercury emissions from the plant; barring that, we want to find a way to shut it down.

What's more important – the health of the people of this region or a polluter's profit margins?

Saslaw reports on legislative moves, outlines priorities

By Hon. Richard Saslaw

Let me begin by speaking to our priority needs. This year, while we allocated $848 Million for a one time "shot" for transportation ($265 M is earmarked to pay off projected completed prior to last June), we have still not addressed the needs of a long term solution to Virginia's transportation infrastructure. Most interesting, one proposal to "solve" the question of adequate funding for transportation was to heavily fine repeat traffic offenders up to $4000 over 10 years (or the parents of drivers that could not pay the fine for such things as driving 72 in a 65 MPH zone).

The General Assembly, (mostly the House of Delegates) is full of people who think this state can be run without any additional taxes and/or reducing state revenue. The House of Delegates voted to restart the final phase out of the car tax, which when fully implemented would almost equal what we spend on all of the state's 16 four year colleges combined. It is schemes like this that have starved our colleges for the past 13 years, forcing them to take more and more out-of-state students, which ultimately limits the number of Virginians that can attend these flagship schools. Those lucky enough to gain a slot, will be looking at significantly rising tuition and fees. Currently Virginia is investing approximately $9,000/college student. By contrast, North Carolina, Michigan and California spend more than $22,000/student.

In the area of K-12, our state has a constitutional requirement to fund what are referred to as the Standards of Quality. Until the slight increase in the sales tax last summer, the state never came close to its obligation. As a result local government has relied heavily on the real estate tax to make up the difference. The current Board of Supervisors in Fairfax County is considering reducing the real estate tax rate by 10 - 12 cents/hundred to offset the increase in assessments. Much of this reduction will be made possible by a change in the tax structure in Richmond which vastly increases local government funds. Believe you me, I wished we could do all of this with no taxes.

I am a small businessman with businesses in Virginia and Maryland and am obligated to significant taxes. However, this is an urban state with urban problems and they cannot be solved without cost. We can take pride in the fact that Virginia was just recognized by Governing Magazine as "the best run state in America." This recognition came after we raised the sales tax last year from 4.5 to 5%. Beginning July 1, the sales tax on food will be reduced to 2.5%.

If we are to be successful in the future we must meet the needs of our growing population on all fronts - education, transportation, public safety and health & human services.

Democrats Adopt-A-Block crew cleans Van Dorn gateway

By Mark Feldhein, ADC Adopt-A-Block Coordinator

A cloudy day welcomed seven Adopt-a-block volunteers on Saturday, April 23 as they walked along Duke Street from the 395 entrance ramp and the Van Dorn Street overpass. Led by ADC member Mark Feldheim, the group met at Sears Automotive at Landmark at 8:00 am and were issued gloves, trash bags and orange safety vests.

Following coffee and doughnuts and fellowship with other volunteers the group set out to beautify their little space of Alexandria. The most interesting piece of trash found during the event was a wheel and tire. In the end the group collected approximately fifteen bags of trash.

Feldheim said the ADC will now receive a sign along Dule Street indicating the ADC has adopted that portion. The section was selected because it is a gateway into Alexandria and because of the high volume of people who are exposed to it.

Thanks to Marge Thiel, Susan and Ben Kellom and Todd Ruopp and Dan and Jen from the Fairfax part of Alexandria for their help.

David Englin 45th District

If we don't fight for what we believe in, we'll never get it. I have a record of effective leadership, building the grassroots, and fighting for what's right. We must elect someone to this safe Democratic seat with the vision and energy to build the grassroots for the future so we can, over the long haul, change the face of the General Assembly and pass progressive legislation to make housing more affordable, fix and fund education, lower the cost of health-care, and protect the rights of all Virginians. - Co-founder of the Alexandria Non-Profit Council
- Leader of the "Save the Arlandria Clinic" effort

- Leader in the struggle to preserve the Parker Gray neighborhood

Just as I stood up and spoke out on behalf of so many in our community, I will go to Richmond and stand up and speak up for you. Thank you for your vote on June, 14, learn more at www.elsiemosqueda.com

Randy Sengel Commonwealths Attorney

Curiously juxtaposing the campaign slogan "eighty percent of success is showing up" with "stay under the radar", Randy Sengel says he has no immediate plans for a campaign website address. Campaign staff positions of bass player, head carpenter, and parade coordinator have been filled.

Seventeen original 1997 "Keep Randy Sengel Commonwealth's Attorney" signs were recently located in Sengel's basement, and are undergoing restoration for use in November. Thank you for your continued support.

ADC book club read Pulitzer Prize winning author

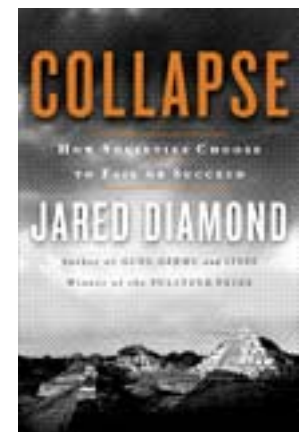

By Peter Schumaier, ADC Member

The ADC Book Club will meet May 18 at 7:30 pm at La Madeleine in Old Town (500 King Street). The ADC Book Club meets ten times a year on the third Wednesday of the month at the same time and location. For more information please contact Peter Schumaier at 703-549-3204.

In May, the club will read and discuss Jared Diamond's "Collapse: How Societies Choose to Fail or Succeed."

In his million-copy bestseller Guns, Germs, and Steel, Pulitzer Prize winning author Jared Diamond examined how and why Western civilizations developed the technologies and immunities that allowed them to dominate much of the world. Now in this brilliant companion volume, Diamond probes the other side of the equation: What caused some of the great civilizations of the past to collapse into ruin, and what can we learn from their fates?

Leadership Circle needs help meeting 2005 goal

By Patrick A. Mulloy, ADC Leadership Circle Chair

As you know the Alexandria Democratic Headquarters plays a key role in the many successes of our Democratic candidates.

Having a storefront office on one of Alexandria's most prominent gateways is a major asset. It is the hub for volunteers to make phone calls, assemble mailings, and rally support for our candidates.

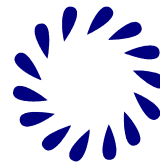

Our ability to maintain this Headquarters is completely dependent on your help. Contributions to the Leadership Circle provide the sole support for the fulltime Alexandria Democratic Headquarters. In 2005 our goal is $23,000 and we have commitments for $10,000 so far.

As you know this year we have a number of priorities that include: (1) electing Lt. Governor Tim Kaine as our Governor (2) helping win other statewide offices, namely Lt. Governor and Attorney General, and (3) keeping Democrats in our House of Delegates and Senate seats in Richmond.

You can help. How? Take the opportunity to renew your membership in, or join, the Leadership Circle. Call me to receive a form and make a

ADC member calls for a blueprint for Virginia

By Mark D. Williams,

One of the hardest things for any political organization to do is to find an effective way to confront the challenges of an ever-changing electorate while maintaining our long held beliefs. It is important that we develop a political organization that has the ability to change as the needs of the electorate change, but, remain true to our long held beliefs.

As we go into this period of self examination we must ask some serious questions to ourselves. Can a party be a champion of a woman's right to choose while giving strong consideration to the beliefs of anti-abortionists? Can a party still fight for the hopes of the middle class and still play to the realities of the upper-class? Do we really have a big tent or an elite social club? How can we provide leadership for America and the global community? These questions should represent the tip of the iceberg as we decide our course of action in addressing the hopes of all Americans.

First, we must start in the way we address political opponents. One of the scariest things I have heard is someone call the President of the United States the enemy. Now, I am not a fan of the President but he is far from being classified the enemy. We may disagree with his methods but I do believe the President puts forth his policies because he believes he is working in the best interests of all Americans. We must first strive to make politics a game of statesmen (and stateswomen). We must return to the days were we both fight for our beliefs but, at the end of the day, shake hands and remain thankful for the greatness of our democracy.

Next, we must sit down and put forth a real BLUEprint for Virginia. This plan of action must speak to the beliefs of all Virginians and our hopes for the future. Our hopes should begin with developing economically responsible programs that will assist all Virginians in realizing the endless possibilities of the American dream. These economically responsible programs should include a real investment in education, anti-gentrification tax credits, and increased funding for small businesses. But our BLUEprint for Virginia should not be limited to the home front. Our BLUEprint must address the needs of the "Global Community." We must be willing to satisfy the humanitarian needs of the world or face the hunger of extremists at home. All of these ideas must be discussed and debated so that everyone has a voice and everyone has a vote. No idea should be dismissed and no vote is to be taken for granted if we are to win future elections.

Lastly, we must start training the next generation of leaders. We must give those who will lead us in the future the tools necessary to become even more effective at leading our great Commonwealth.

I know that any BLUEprint is not written in stone. Like our Constitution, it should be fluid and speak to the needs of the generation it represents. But, it is important that we use this document as our love letter to the electorate. It must be a document that addresses our fears and rejoices in our hopes. It must be a document that speaks to the things that we believe in and not just the things we are against. It is important that we show that Democrats are the ones who can really provide "Leadership for America and the Global Community."
